

WAR IN UKRAINE

White van army of British volunteers mobilises for Ukraine

Sports stars, builders, publicans, vets and even a former prime minister are ferrying supplies of aid to Ukraine

David Cameron tweeted a picture of himself and Rizvana Poole, a town councillor from Chipping Norton, ready to deliver a lorry filled with supplies to the Red Cross

TWITTER/DAVID_CAMERON

When Russia invaded Ukraine, Stuart Meaker had been retired from professional cricket for five months. He had some free time, a desire to help — and a large white van.

(more)

Khaled El Mayet, 38, a solutions consultant from Cheltenham, led a convoy of six ambulances, funded by donations and filled with medical supplies, out to the border last week, delivering them to Global Outreach Doctors, which will take them into Ukraine.

<https://www.thetimes.co.uk/article/0464eef2-a7a2-11ec-a9dd-14c997a643ea?shareToken=a8d58010397f05510a9cee4767c930b7>